Globalization and Civilization: Are They Forces in Conflict?

$ 35.00

Product Description

The twentieth century terminated the debate about the Cold War and inaugurated two new debates about globalization and prospects for a clash of civilizations. This volume synthesizes the two new debates into a question: Is globalization a dialogue or a clash of civilizations? The book assembles some major thinkers of the twenty first century to address issues from Western hegemony to postmodernism, from globalization and the world economy to the emerging forces of global culture.

About the Author

Ali A. Mazrui, the principal editor of this volume, is a leading theorist of the role of culture in world affairs and is widely regarded as an original thinker on comparative civilization.
